

Organisations are realising that coaching can result in improved performance and productivity. Coaching draws the best out of people in terms of thinking, language and behaviour. This ability to engage another's potential is the heart of coaching and the secret of enhanced performance.